INSTRUMENT OF GOVERNANCE
COLLEGE OF EDUCATION AND HUMAN DEVELOPMENT
THE UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS AT SAN ANTONIO

1. GENERAL

A. PREAMBLE

The faculty of the College of Education and Human Development (COEHD), University of Texas at San Antonio (UTSA), through the College of Education and Human Development By-Laws, provide the organization, structure, and procedures by which and through which they function within the range of their authority and responsibilities as specified in the University of Texas at San Antonio Handbook of Operating Procedures (HOP). This document is intended to be consistent with the policies specified in the HOP. To the extent that there is any inconstancy between this document and the HOP, the procedures in the HOP shall prevail. To the extent that there is any inconsistency between the procedures of other academic units in the College of Education and Human Development, the College of Education and Human Development By-Laws shall prevail.

This document hereby creates the framework for the organization, structure and operating rules and procedures adopted by the College of Education and Human Development as its instrument of governance designed to direct the performance of its functions and for the regulation of its affairs. It is predicated upon principles of shared governance in the continuous exercise of authority over the performance of the College’s actions and functions.

B. PRINCIPLES FOR SHARED GOVERNANCE

1. Governance should be conducted according to the highest standards of ethical, scholarly, and collegial behavior.

2. Governance assumes varying points of view that are welcomed, debated, and acted upon without fear of threat or reprisal.

3. Governance operates within the framework of University, System, and Legislative policies, rules, and statutes.

4. The well being of the College of Education and Human Development depends upon strong faculty and strong administrators working jointly towards excellence through mutually developed goals within an agreed-upon governance structure.

5. Authority to participate in the decision-making structure of the College is a right and responsibility of tenure-track and non-tenure track faculty, administrators, academic professionals, students, and staff.

1 Academic professionals include specialists and clinicians.
6. Faculty governance and program decision-making is a shared responsibility. Faculty and administrators are obliged to contribute time, energy, and ideas to the development and maintenance of the College.

7. The involvement of faculty in the governance of the College, through a democratic process, applies to principles, policies, and processes that affect academic personnel, curricula, resources, and the mission of the College.

8. The governance structure is designed to afford a voice to all faculty members while recognizing, responding to, and promoting the voices of racial, gender, ethnic, and other minorities.

9. The governance structure is designed to afford a voice to tenure track and non-tenure track faculty, academic professionals, non-faculty administrators, students, and staff.

10. Decision making in the College is explicit and carried out in open forums.

11. Representation and participation in College decision-making are accompanied by the requirement of accountability for the nature and consequences of such participation.

C. RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES FOR SHARED GOVERNANCE

Tenure-track, and non-tenure track faculty, academic professionals, non-faculty administrators, and staff at the university, college, and department levels have a duty to share in the rights and responsibilities of governance and administration of the college. These rights and responsibilities include making recommendations to the Dean of the College of Education and Human Development regarding:

1. The form and structure of governance in the College of Education and Human Development.

2. New programs and courses, course changes, course content, and manner of instruction in present programs and courses.

3. Requirements for matriculation and degrees.

4. Faculty recruitment, hiring, retention, promotion, granting of tenure, dismissal, developmental leave, and emeritus status.

5. Selection of department chairs and participation in the selection of the Dean and other college administrators, both interim and permanent. Recommending committees, however established, shall include representation from the faculty.

6. Rules and procedures for the academic discipline of students.

7. Norms for teaching responsibilities and the evaluation of faculty.

8. Policies and procedures governing annual performance reviews and merit increases.
9. Evaluation of administrators in the COEHD.

10. Other matters of concern to the faculty including, but not limited to:

   a. general policies and procedures for determining class size, workload, course scheduling, and teaching assignments at all UTSA campuses.

   b. general policies and procedures for the allocation of financial resources in the College.

When the Dean does not act upon a recommendation of the faculty or College Council, he or she will provide a written statement of explanation to the College Council, which in turn, shall disseminate the explanation to the general faculty.

Formal authority is vested in the Dean by the University of Texas System Regents and administration and by the administration of The University of Texas at San Antonio. The Dean represents the College of Education & Human Development faculty as their visible and expressive advocate. As such, the Dean is expected to exhibit, exemplify, and call forth the best efforts of the faculty in teaching, research, and service. However, within the normative structure of the College, the Dean is also accountable to the faculty, and effective authority is dependent on their support. Faculty represents the academic heart and conscience of the College. In contributing to the intellectual life of the College, faculty represent the best values of the profession in scholarship, teaching, and service in relation to academic professionals, non-faculty administrators, staff, and students, as well as to faculty colleagues.

Academic departments are the fundamental organizing units for the general faculty in the College. As much of the business of the College as possible shall be conducted at the departmental level. Those powers specifically prohibited to the College or not delegated by this document or other documents are reserved to the departments. These units are governed democratically in that policy and program decisions are made by faculty vote. Department chairs are responsible for conducting the daily business of the academic units, and they serve as representatives of their units in the administration of the College, ensuring strong representation of faculty concerns and sentiments in administrative matters.

The well-being of the College of Education and Human Development as a whole is dependent upon shared responsibilities for governance and decision-making among the Dean, tenure-track and non-tenure track faculty, academic professionals, non-faculty administrators, staff, and students. This Instrument of Governance is designed to provide a structure for and to facilitate such a partnership. At the College level, the College Council provides a public forum for ensuring joint decision making among the Dean, tenure-track and non-tenure track faculty, academic professionals, non-faculty administrators, staff, and students regarding those issues pertaining to the College as a whole. The College Council does not displace the formal authority of the Dean but ensures explicit and ongoing consultation with tenure-track and non-tenure track faculty, academic professionals, non-faculty administrators, staff, and students and consideration of their advice, recommendations, and actions.
