Clinical Course Syllabi

Course syllabi are an indispensable tool for organizing courses and expressing our expectations of UTSA students. University policy states that all course syllabi should be posted online and made available to students. While, each individual instructor is responsible for the academic content of their course syllabus, syllabi should include the following elements:

- Course number, name, and prerequisites;
- Instructor’s name, contact information, office hours, and location;
- Grading scheme and anticipated assignments;
- Textbook, reading assignments, and/or reading list;
- Description of the course’s learning objectives;
- Schedule of assignments and exams;
- Attendance policies, class participation and “civility” expectations; and
- UTSA policies and services regarding disabilities and academic dishonesty.

UTSA graduate counseling students take their clinical courses in the following sequence:
