RESEARCH INTEREST AND SPECIALIZATIONS

My research uses quantitative, qualitative, and mixed methods approaches to explore issues influencing the experiences and outcomes of underrepresented students in U.S. higher education. I use critical lenses in my work drawn from the fields of demography, sociology, and geography. My areas of research interest focus on the influence of 1) college affordability; 2) Hispanic-Serving Institutions; and 3) power structures & governance on the trajectories, experiences, and opportunities of historically underrepresented students. The overall aim of my research is intended to contribute to the development of higher education policies and practices that enhance historically underrepresented students' equity and success in higher education.

|---------------------------|---|--------------|
| Director of Policy | Alliance for Research on Regional Colleges (ARRC) | 2021-present |
|---------------------------|---|--------------|

ARRC's purpose is to use evidence and research to generate greater interest in and appreciation for the contributions of regional colleges and universities to educational opportunity and regional wellbeing. ARRC seeks to be responsive to shifts in public funding, policy, and society by examining what these trends mean in real time for regional colleges and universities. To do this, ARRC generates evidence-based recommendations for policy and practice while advancing scholarly and societal understanding of regional colleges and universities. Co-Directors: Cecilia M. Orphan, Ph.D., Assistant Professor, Higher Education, Morgridge College of Education, University of Denver, Alisa Hicklin Fryar, Ph.D., Associate Professor, Political Science, University of Oklahoma, Andrew Koricich, Ph.D., Associate Professor of Higher Education, Education Leadership and Policy Studies, Appalachian State University, and Kevin McClure, Ph.D., Associate Professor of Higher Education, Department of Educational Leadership, University of North Carolina Wilmington.
